Learning Outcomes (notmore than 100 words)	LearningOutcomeofTheStudy: The study of modern Indian history is not all about making of the nation but also studying the roll of people who played a significant roll in different stages. History is not the narration of what is unfolding from above but is all about the people who make difference with their contribution. Peasants, workers, ordinary people, intellectuals, political stalwarts, aristocrats, and the host of them made indelible contribution in shaping the destiny of this nation by freeing the people from the yoke of foreign subjection. The role of identity, agency, ideas and other class of intelligentsia will be examined in its diachronic perspective by making the study of history as an exercise of participatory in nature and inclusive in its content.

Course Objectives (not more than 100 words)	This course primarily attempts to familiarize the student to the genre of History Writing particularly by focusing on its basic methods, mechanics, and principles. The ART OF HISTORY WRITING is not only concerned with structure and style of language but is also about its presentation with facts without prejudice and subjectivity. Unlike creative writing, it aims to elucidate the events with the appropriate empirical evidence in its temporal and spatial context rather than giving flight to imagination. Though the historian as a creative scholar in the sense of the term is being but restricted by linguistic economy and disciplinary tenets? Delineation of events and description of episodes cannot cross the limit as levied by the primary sources; therefore, The ART OF HISTORY WRITING hinges upon the process of selection of events, interpretation of facts through the process of historical enquiry which finally culminate in the form of research paper, project report and historical works. The process of history writing is being undertaken in different formats by adhering to certain writing principles as a part of academic endeavour. Book reviews or literature survey, preparing term papers or conference papers, dissertation or monograph, thesis or grant research project are all produced by confirming to the pattern of writing without diluting the content from its historical core values. The course also aims to educate the students to enhance their writing skills by taking recourse to various online support systems and other AI products. Needless to stress, footnoting, referencing, preparing bibliometric reports and other citational nitty-gritties will also form the part of this course.
